

Tournament Destination: Indian River Colony Club

By Joyce Wilden

Colorful golf carts whizzed silently past old oaks while birds twittered and the early August sunrise glinted on dewy grass. The third annual Temple Israel Golf Tournament was underway and 19 teams were participating at Indian River Colony Club in Viera.

“We always enjoy playing the course here,” said Temple Israel tournament organizer, Brian Onek. “Our golfers especially enjoy the challenge – with all the water in play.”

Indian River Colony Club Pro Shop Manager, Wally Bandura smiles. He knows every inch of the private, 18-hole championship course. Most days he interacts with the resident members of IRCC, the 55+ community with private amenities and a country club environment. Many of its members belong to the resident golf association and have mastered the beautifully designed course.

“It’s a lot of fun to hear the reaction of players who have never been out here before,” said Bandura. Most have no idea that they can get this caliber of play from a local Brevard course.” He added, “This is a private course, but we welcome a number of tournaments every year.”

Indian River Colony Club provides a near perfect solution for those charged with finding a location for golf tournaments. In addition to the serene natural beauty of the course, a conveniently located Pro Shop and top notch facilities make the day one that golfers of all skill levels will long remember.

A quick visit to www.IndianRiverColonyClub.com reveals both an overview and a hole-by-hole description of the golf course, which “rewards precise shot-making.” Meticulously maintained by a professional staff, the course is best enjoyed by the enthusiastic golfer, with unique features at each hole.

The Temple Israel players agreed that the fairways were beautifully maintained and the greens putt very true. Onek summed up their annual summer tournament in one word: success.

“The course was in really excellent shape. Many thanks to Wally and his staff – they were all very helpful and a pleasure to work with.”

Wally Bandura and the knowledgeable Pro Shop staff stand ready to assist your organization or corporation with tournament planning and logistics. For additional information and availability, please call 321.255.6050.
